Novel Remedy for Obesity.

Not so very long ago a Philadelphia Inquirer man got off at the twelfth floor of a big office building instead of the eleventh, as he had intended. As it was a case of going down instead of up, he concluded to walk back to the floor he wanted instead of waiting for the elevator. At the foot of the stairway he almost ran into an acquaintance, whose office is on the twelfth floor, and whose weight very nearly approaches 300 pounds. The acquaintance was puffing and blowing as he prepared to ascend the flight of steps leading to the floor above.

"Makes you blow to climb a flight of stairs, doesn't it?" remarked the reporter.

"Climb a flight of stairs?" diedairfully rejoined he of the 300 pounds between puffs. "Why, young man, I've just climbed eleven flights and I'm going to do another."

"Mean to say you've walked all the way up here?"

"That's just what I mean. Elevators are running, too."

"I know that. Came up in one myself a few minutes ago. But how on earth do you account for doing all this climbing? You don't look crazy."

"Neither am I. Never was more sensible in my life. Just made a new discovery, that's all. Realized how fat I've been getting the past three years!"

The reporter nodded in the affirmative.

"Well, it was in spite of everything I could do to stop the accumulation of tissue. I was afraid. I could soon do for the fat-boy act in a side show until one of my friends bet me a bottle of—of ginger ale that I couldn't climb three flights of stairs in this building I won the bet, and in doing so discovered when I weighed myself a few minutes later that I had lost nearly a pound in weight. That gave me a tip, and the next day I climbed five flights, the next day six, and—well, now I do the whole blamed twelve every day, and I'm losing flesh so rapidly my clothes have to be taken in once a week at least. It's a great scheme, and it isn't patented, either, so if you know any other fat men in town I don't mind your letting them into the secret."

Just Like Raising the Dead.

Dr. Soren Christiansen of Missoula, Mont., was in Minneapolis on his way home after a two months' visit in Denmark, and told the Times of a remarkable attempt to bring back to life a man who had died in a hospital at Naestved, Denmark, two weeks ago. The experiment was measurably successful, as resuscitation was effected several hours after the man was pronounced dead. Dr. Maag, who was in charge, was unable to maintain life, however.

The patient had died from typhoid fever and Dr. Maag decided to try an experiment. Respiration had ceased completely and the body was cold. Direct massage of the heart was resorted to. The chest was cut open directly over the heart, and through the incision the physician passed his hand and seized the heart. He commenced a series of compressions, and in short time the heart commenced to work of its own accord. The action of the heart gradually became stronger, but the man had not commenced to breathe. Only after the heart had been acting half an hour did the first gasp for air come.

The patient was then assisted in this for about an hour, until finally he was able to breathe quite freely. At the same time his cheeks began to assume a natural color. He lay in this condition another half hour, but without regaining consciousness or appearing to feel the effects of the incision. Then there was a reaction and respiration ceased, although the heart continued to act eight hours longer. A second effort was made to induce heart action, but without result.
